The other occupants of the car escaped injury.

-The proposed improvement of four miles of rural road in Goshen town ship will vary evidently not material ize this year, it was learned Friday, because of the fact that the board of trustees has determined not to accept either of the two bids recently received for the purchase of a $36,000 bond issue for road work. It is understood that the best bid offered par and ac-crued interest and $18 premium for trustees to pay half the attorney's fees and other incidental expenses. To this and other things Trustee Frank Barber entered objection, it is understood, and largely because of the lateness of the season it is practically decided to abandon the project this year. My Smile. Our smile still holds its wonted lace, due east and west across our face, and sometimes it seems half in-We cannot dance, nor can we sing, but we can tote a smile, by jing! Sometimes we push it from its place, but that is when we shave our face, and when we have done shaving, then, our smile is on the job again. Worms may kill our tomato plants, hot irons may scorch our Palm Beach pauts, laundries ma yspifiicate our shirts and fix our collar so it hurts, a neighbor's dog may kill our cat, but our smile stays right where it's at, and being such a happy cuss makes the old world smile back at us. NORTH CANFIELD STREET 000000000000000 Annual Consumption of Wood by the Wood Manufacturing Industries

Statistics have been compiled by the forest service which show for the first time precisely how the lumber produced in the country is utilized. About 45 billion feet of lumber of all kinds is the annual production of the United States; of this near 25 billion feet, board measure, are further manufactured, the other portion remaining for rough construction lumber and for similar purposes. This is exclusive of material which reaches its final use in the form of fuel, railroad ties, posts, poles, pulpwood, cooperage, wood distillates, and the barks and extracts demanded by the tanning industry.

The work of collecting and compiling the figures extended over a considerable period and was carried out state by state; but as one full year was made the basis of statistics in each state the total is a fair average of the use of lumber in further manufacture in the whole country. Between 50 and 60 per cent of the lumber produced is subject to further manufacture. In preparing the figures in this way, however, it should be remembered that considerable material reaches shops and factories in the form of logs, bolts and billets without having passed through sawmills, and while this material is included in these statistics this fact should be remembered in comparing statistics with those of lumber production.

Nearly or quite 100 different woods are used in this country under their own names, while an unknown number find their way to shops and factories without being identified or separately listed, except under general names. In quantity the soft woods, the needleleaf or coniferous trees, are most im portant, but there is a greater number of species among the hard woods, or broadleaf trees. Yellow pine comes first with more than eight billion feet, followed by white pine with three bil lion, and Douglas fir with a little more than two billion. It should be under stood, however, that the term "yellow pine" includes several species, the three most important of which are longleaf, shortleaf and loblolly. Oak, including all species, has-nearly two billion feet, and is the most important hard wood. Maple comes next. Dogwood comes about halfway down the list with more than seven million board feet, and of those species mentioned Turkish boxwood comes last, with less than thirty thousand feet, followed by many others too insignificant to list, but making a total of all kinds of more than a million feet. Of the native species, laurel, holly and yuca fall very near the foot of the list in relative quantities used.

Fifty-five principal industries use wood as raw material. Their relative importance is hard to indicate, because quantity alone is not in all cases a criterion of value of an industry to the community in which it is situated.

nor to the country as a whole. More than one-half of the total consumption consists of planing mill products, the largest items of which are flooring, siding, celling and finishing. The next industry, in point of quantity of wood used, is the manufacture of boxes and crates. Nearly four times as much wood is demanded by makers of boxes and crates as by the builders of steam and electric cars, which come next, and fivefold the amount that goes into furniture, which in turn leads vehicle manufacture. Vehicles demand surprisingly large supplies of good, and much of it must be of a high class in order to meet requirements for frames, gears and bodies. Chairs, listed separately from furniture, come after novelties and supplies for dairymen, poultry keepers and apiarists, and just before handles and musical instruments. About midway down the list come pumps and wood pipes. Among the products important enough to list separately are canes and umbrella sticks, brooms, firearms, artificial limbs and tobacco pipes.

The apportionment of wood among the various industries grades from planing mill products, which take most, down to aeroplanes and dry kilns, at the bottom of the list.

$1,500 Shells

Every time a big gun is fired, 300 pounds goes in smoke and a splash, and there are 372 such guns in the fleet which Admiral Callaghan led out of Spithead recently. Torpedoes cost ten times as much, but they have the advantage, from the taxpayers' point of view, that they can be picked up again after they have been fired in practice.

Many of the big ships burn oil fuel as an auxiliary to their coal, or at least are fitted for that purpose, but there are 127 torpedo crafts, besides the submarines, which burn oil fuel alone. In the aggregate their tanks and double bottoms can accommodate 10,315 tons of fuel, for which we have to pay 5 pounds a ton.

Coal is not so expensive, but it does not go so far. If the twenty-seven dreadnoughts now in full commission were sent on an eight hours' fullpower coal-burning run, they would consume 4,320 tons of fuel, running up a bill of some 3,000 pounds.

If a single dreadnought battle squadron of eight ships were ordered to steam at full speed for twenty four hours, and to fire each gun and each torpedo tube once, the cost to the nation would be approximately 200,000 pounds, allowing nothing for the depreciation of material.-Tid Bits.
